

Aqueous Urea Wash Solutions for Oil Adhesion Reduction on Copper Nanoparticles. Oil droplets remaining on the surface of metal particles is one of the major causes of failure to efficiently process ultra-fine copper powders for electronics fabrication. Herein, we propose an aqueous urea wash solution, which rapidly enhances the dispersibility of copper nanoparticles (Cu-NP) in oil, and the adherence of the Cu-NP in the oil droplets to the surface of the Cu-NP was mitigated. Based on these results, in this study, we prepared a urea-lauric acid-coated Cu-NP with a narrow particle size distribution, and investigated the urea wash process. The addition of a urea solution to oil induces osmotic pressure inside the oil droplets, which facilitates the dispersal of oil droplets. However, the urea solution is consumed during the dispersal of the oil droplets, resulting in a lower concentration of the urea solution in the oil phase. To reduce the decrease in the urea concentration, we added additional urea solution in the form of urea microparticles (PM). Moreover, we propose that the drastic reduction in the adherence of the Cu-NP in the oil droplets was caused by the adsorption of the Cu-NP in the oil droplets. Therefore, we further confirmed that urea solution is effectively adsorbed by the Cu-NP surface using inductively coupled plasma mass spectrometry (ICP-MS). To confirm the effect of the urea wash on oil-Cu-NP adhesion, the roughness of the Cu-NP surface in the oil droplets was investigated using atomic force microscopy (AFM). The obtained results indicated that the urea wash can effectively mitigate the oil-Cu-NP adhesion. Ed., Springer-Verlag, Berlin, 1989. M.
